In a Freudian analysis of Mary Shelley's Frankenstein, the most significant view taken is that the Creature and creator are two aspects of the same person. This comes from Freud's idea of the 'psychologically divided self'. He held that there are three parts of the human mind. The first is the id,

Freud called it 'the return of the repressed'. The Uncanny in Art Waxwork dolls, automata, doubles, ghosts, mirrors, the home and its secrets, madness and severed limbs are mentioned throughout The Uncanny, influencing painters and sculptors to explore these themes and blur the boundaries between animate and inanimate, human and non-human, life and death.

The Uncanny | Freud Museum London
Just as the creature haunts Victor Frankenstein, his creator, our unconscious can haunt us. At least, according to Freud's theory of psychic life. If we don't put in the work to acknowledge what's going on in deep in our heads and souls, we risk falling prey to the monsters within.

Mary shelly's frankenstein | Bartleby
Around the time that The Golem was released, Sigmund Freud was writing about the uncanny. His writings, as critic Mark Fisher puts it, led to the association of the uncanny with "what should not be alive acting as if it were". This is the crux of terror of films like The Golem, Metropolis, Frankenstein, etc. We see on screen things that have just enough basis in reality, twisted in such a
